It Washes Soiled Notes, Making Them as Clean and Crisp as New Ones

WILL START IN A FEW DAYS

Bank in Berlin, Germany, Sent 77,000 Marks to Test the Process.

Washington, April 17-Uncle Sam has started a laundry to wash his soiled paper money. He is bent on economizing and figures that he can save a tidy sum each year by laundering the soiled bills instead of destroying them as now and substituting new ones. Some of Uncle Sam's employees have invented a note laundering machine which is the only one of the kind in the world. The machine is modelled along simple lines. The laundering consists of three processes—the cleaning, rinsing and ironing. The operator, standing at one end of the machine, places the notes on a band of cotton cloth which moving slowly over the rollers, carries the notes into the cleansing tube The notes pass through the machine and are held between two bands of cloth. The upper cloth moves slightly faster than the lower, thus giving the notes a slight scrubbing. The notes are then carried into tank containing the cleansing liquid consisting of hot water, pure castle soap and a germicide and bleaching chemical. This not only cleans the bills but also destroys any germs. As the note passes through the cleansing tub the water is agitated by wooden rollers. It is next carried by the cotton bands into the rinsing solution, after which it passes around a warm revolving cylinder where it is dried and ironed.

. A note dirty and wrinkled going in one end of the machine emerges in about one minute and a half from the other end clean, free from germs, smooth and crisp as a new bill. The crispness is restored by resinous sizing in the liquid. The notes when laundered cannot be distinguished, except by experts, from new bills. The new machine will start on a regular schedule of operation within a few days. At present the redemption division of the Treasury destroys all solled notes it receives in return for new bills. The soiled bills when laundered can be put back into cir.

Arrangements are being completed by the state board of education for the summer session of the Danbury Normal Training School to be held at Danbury, July 1 to 26. The subjects laundered can be put back into cir. laundered can be put back into circulation. The officials of the Treasury believe that the laundering machine will not only gradually result in cleaner money but will also tend to reduce to a certain extent the shortenge of small potentials. The subjects and instructors are given below: Arithmetic, I. K. Chance, New Milford; drawing, Isabelle Mackay, Danbury; duties of citizenship, J. R. Perkins, Danbury; grammar, H. O. Organized Gang of Thieves. Albert Lambert, aged 14 years, was arrested at Torrington Monday afternoon on a charge of theft of chisels, saws and other tools from the Union Hardware Company, which it is alleged he gave to an uncle, George Brown, who sold the goods in Waterbury and Thomaston. Lambert's arrest grew out of the arrest of Brown in Waterbury. The officials of the hardware company believe this is part of an organized gang that has been at work for some time and that evidence will be secured to implicate other employees in the deal. Found Dead in Pasture, Owen Hunt of Norfolk, who had been missing from his home for several days, was found Thursday dead in a pasture. He was 72 years old
